Audition Script:

Scene: Michelle is in her room creating a “Get Ready With Me” video to post to her social media account before leaving on a week-long road trip across the US with her mother.

MICHELLE: Okay, everyone. Do you remember that 'America the Beautiful' project I mentioned before? The one where my history teacher literally wants a thousand words on why the U.S. is 'beautiful to me'? So, I'm venting to my mom saying, 'How am I supposed to write about the entire country when I've literally never left this zip code?' I haven't exactly had a lot of opportunities for research, you know what I mean?

And my mom—I love her, but she's so extra— she literally planned a cross-country road trip during my spring break and we are leaving Bakersfield tomorrow morning. We're going all the way from California to New York City and she's got the whole itinerary ready. We're hitting the Grand Canyon (very aesthetic), this giant Arch in the Midwest, and like... two different parks with mountains in the east? It's giving National Geographic but make it a mother-daughter bonding sesh.

Alright, the Pros: Escaping this bubble. Starbucks drive-thrus in every state. Buying cute souvenirs from random gift shops. (Text bubble pops up: 'GET ME SOMETHING!!') Don't worry Allison, I got you.

The Cons: My mom's '80s rock' playlist for 3,000 miles. (Actually help.) Missing you guys and questionable hotel lighting for my daily posts. So... wish me luck! I'm going to be trapped in a car for 10 days. If I don't post, I've been forced to look at a rock for too long. Love ya! Bye!
